Lost in Translation?: Symbology

Increased globalization and the rise of new trading venues and data sources has made trading more complex. The lack of a universal system of symbology for security identification has created problems in the transaction process from security identification to clearing and settlement. This panel will review the current discussions regarding creation of a common system of symbology with a close look at the benefits a single system would provide and the challenges faced in creating such a system.

Moderator:

Tine Thoresen, Editor, Inside Reference Data

Panelists:

Jerry Avenell, Business Development, Chi-X Europe

Mark Husler, Head of Data and Software Business Development, London Stock Exchange

Richard Newbury, Market Development Manager, SIX Telekurs

Paul Kennedy, Reference Data Business Manager, Interactive Data Corp

The Job Market in the Financial Information Industry

The global financial crisis, shifting transparency requirements, and changing technologies have impacted the financial information job market as firms have gone out of business, budgets and salaries have been slashed, and positions have been redefined. Our panel will examine the current market for jobs in our industry from both the perspectives of a hiring manager and a job seeker and offer predictions at what the future might hold in this area.

Moderator:

David Anderson, Principal, Atradia Consulting

Panelists:

Steve Allen, Director, Bank of America

Andy Hunt, MD & Global Head Trading Technology, JPMorgan
